The Unhealthy Cycle of Competition

A story that Ravi Kumar shares helps understand the unhealthy cycle of competition: One day as I was jogging in the morning I noticed a person about half a km ahead. I could guess he was running a little slower than me and that made me feel good, I said to myself I will try catch up with him. So I started running faster and faster. Every block, I was gaining on him a little bit. After just a few minutes I was only about 100 feet behind him, so I really picked up the pace and pushed myself. I was determined to catch up with him. Finally, I did! I caught up and passed him. Inwardly I felt very good. "I beat him". Of course, he didn't even know we were racing. After I passed him, I realized I had been so focused on competing against him that 'I had missed my turn to my house'. In fact I realized that I had missed so many other things-- I had missed the focus on my inner peace, I missed to see the beauty of greenery around, I missed to do my inner namasmaran, and in the needless hurry stumbled and slipped twice or thrice and might have hit the footpath and broken a limb. It then dawned on me, isn't that what happens in life when we focus on competing with co-workers, neighbors, friends, family, trying to outdo them or trying to prove that we are more successful or more important and in the bargain miss on our happiness within our own surroundings? We spend our time and energy running after them and we miss out on our own paths to our given destination.

The problem with unhealthy competition is that it's a never ending cycle. There will always be somebody ahead of you, someone with a better job, nicer car, more money in the bank, more education, a prettier wife, a more handsome husband, better behaved children, better circumstances, and so on. But one important realization is that you can be the best that you can be, when you are not competing with anyone. Some people are insecure because they pay too much attention to what others are, where others are going, wearing, driving, and so on. Take whatever you have, like your height, your weight or your personality. Accept it and realize that you are blessed. Comparison and Competition is the thief of JOY. It kills the Joy of living your own life. So, run your own race that leads to a peaceful, happy, and steady life. +Lumen, CSC

Elections and Exams... And the Season of Lent

held about ten days ago. A couple of days more to go before we shall know the extent of change or the lack of it that the high decibel, bitterly fought contest was able to bring about. Until then, we deem it best to stay silent. Perhaps consider something else...

How does Lent come across to young people of other faiths? I had an opportunity to find out when the young boys and girls of our Boarding undergoing the Madhyamik coaching program insisted on knowing more about this season that begins with ash on people's forehead. Keenly aware that these young minds were schooled in a dispensation different from mine, I judiciously dwelt on notions presumably universal: sin, repentance, penance, and atonement. It seemed to work at first. But soon, I knew I was sounding pathetic. Despite their keen and generous rejoinders I knew I was failing to touch them. Something, something very big was rendering my words ineffectual. Was it my over eagerness to sound intelligible that caused words to lose their meaning and rendered them simplistic, almost facile?

I soon realized Lent is not about some universal tendency or other of humankind to do penance, rejuvenate or rediscover itself. It is simply, all about Jesus of Nazareth. I saw that in the eyes of my listeners. When we tried to understand Lent in the context of the Jesus events we celebrate in Holy Week, it all began to make sense. It even took us beyond the solitary desert of random penance to those crowded areas of human pain and suffering that ache for love and compassion.

While talking with those uninitiated young boys and girls about Jesus who washed the feet of his friends, let himself be beaten and spat on, and killed, we realized Lent is all about Jesus. It occurred to us that if all our abstentions and penances are not held together by intense love; the kind we see at work in those last events of Jesus' life, it won't add up to anything much. May we all have a blessed season of Lent!

It's March, the month in which hundreds of thousands of students will sweat it out in examination halls across the State. LINK wishes them all God's blessings and success.

Billy Graham no more

B i l l y Graham, the well-known evangelist, d i e d February 21, 2018, at the age of 99.

An ordained Southern Baptist Minister, Graham was popular among Christians of all denominations as well as those of other religions. During a public ministry spanning more than half a century, he reached more than 180 countries and preached before more than 200 million people. He was a spiritual advisor to several American presidents and numerous civic and political leaders.

Graham met several times with Saint Pope John Paul II and the two were frequent correspondents.

Cardinal Timothy Dolan of New York released the following statement on Graham's passing:

"As anyone growing up in the 1950's and 1960's can tell you, it was hard not to notice and be impressed by the Reverend Billy Graham. There was no question that the Dolans were a Catholic family, firm in our faith, but in our household there was always respect and admiration for Billy Graham and the work he was doing to bring people to God. Whether it was one of his famous Crusades, radio programs, television specials, or meeting and counseling the presidents, Billy Graham seemed to be everywhere, always with the same message: Jesus is your Savior, and wants you to be happy with Him forever. As an historian, my admiration for him only grew as I studied our nation's religious past, and came to appreciate even more the tremendous role he played in the American evangelical movement. May the Lord that Billy Graham loved so passionately now grant him eternal rest."
